

Rec Center Report for February 2011

submitted by Scott Armstrong on March 9, 2011

Facility Update:

Use of the Rec Center is still going strong, averaging almost 100 people every day. School use in February consisted of 4th grade swim lessons, the TAP program and the start of high school PE classes.

High winds tore many shingles off the roof on Feb. 18. This has happened many other times before, but I have never seen such widespread damage. Steve Dunn quickly arranged for workmen to temporarily patch the roof. We hope that bids to install a metal roof will be finalized soon, and the new roof can be started this spring.

The controls to the pool cover continue to be a big problem. The company believes they are too old to fix and should be replaced, with a $10,000+ price tag. We will have a local electrician tinker with it first. This project would use up the last of this year's capital improvement funds. According to the company, heat savings for using pool covers is $1000+ a month.
